

CONFERENCE ON WRITING ANALYTICS

Writing Analytics and Generative AI

University of South Florida - Tampa

March 7-8, 2025

Registration: <https://writinganalytics.colostate.edu>

Conference Themes

- Definition: How is AI best defined and distinguished as a generative technology?
- Taxonomy: How may AI taxonomies be developed that address varied dimensions of writing processes, feedback, and motivation?
- Pedagogy: How may present pedagogies be used in develop AI for writing instruction and feedback?
- Institutional Response: What institutional responses allow us to develop a series of best practices for using AI in writing classrooms?

Conference Format

The Conference will consist of thematic roundtables and demonstrations of AI tools. Participants are invited to a closing discussion on the future of The Journal of Writing Analytics.

Roundtable discussions include moderated conversations on Research, Teaching & Tools, Data & Assessment, University& Administration, and Publishing.

Demonstrations include R for Institutional Research and DocuScope, an analytic engine, visualization suite, and dictionary authoring tool.

The full conference schedule is available at <https://writinganalytics.colostate.edu>

Speakers

Siân Alsop, Coventry University

Chris Anson, North Carolina State University

Ian G. Anson, University of Maryland, Baltimore County

Duncan A. Buell, University of South Carolina

Norbert Elliot, New Jersey Institute of Technology

Anca Garcia, Georgia Gwinnett College

Jason Godfrey, Accelerate

David Slomp, University of Lethbridge

Brian Gogan, Western Michigan University

S. Morgan Gresham, University of South Florida

Helen Jeoung, University of Pennsylvania

Suzanne Lane, Cornell University

Susan Lang, The Ohio State University

Sherry Rankins-Robertson, University of Central Florida

Valerie Ross, University of Pennsylvania

Alex Rudniy, Drew University

Hotels

La Quinta
3701 East Fowler Avenue
Tampa, FL 33612

Embassy Suites Busch Gardens
3705 Spectrum Boulevard
Tampa, FL 33612

Funding Acknowledgment:

Support for the Conference has in part been provided by a grant from the USF Research Development Institute Conference Grant and the USF Department of English.